MILA KUNIS

A GEM OF A FACIAL

Mila is known for her eyes, but she gets face time too — a HD Diamond and Ruby Peel, which uses precious stones as antioxidants. She paid $7,000 for a session with Scott-Vincent Borba, founder and CEO of Borba Skin Care — twice.

DUCHESS KATE THE ROYAL TREATMENT? THAT'LL BE $48,000

The face the Duchess shows the world comes at a cost: $48K a year, according to reports. That includes a pricey, non-surgical bee venom mask to iron out wrinkles (£73, or $95); weekly manicures; Swiss skin care; twice-monthly pedicures; a spray tan; and high-end makeup.

MADONNA

SHE'S A MECHANICAL GIRL?

The Material Girl is a marvel in her mid-50s — and she owes some of it to her vast material wealth, which allows her to plunk down $75,000 for Cellupulse, an anti-cellulite acoustic wave therapy device. Reportedly, Madge uses the machine twice weekly to increase blood flow and stimulate the production of collagen to smooth out the skin.

SERENA WILLIAMS SERIOUS SOAK

A groundbreaker in her sport — and at Miami's Hotel Victor, where she was the first to indulge in the $5,000 Evian Experience: a bath in 1,000 liters of Evian spring water and daisies. "I could feel the difference the moment I stepped in," Serena said. "The water felt so pure. Also, Evian is a sponsor of the U.S. Open, which I've won the last few years, so I guess you can say the water has been lucky for me."

KIM KARDASHIAN LASER SHOW

Kim is a fan of the Fraxel Laser, which is billed as a "revolutionary" means of zapping away lines and wrinkles, and evening out skin tone. Of course, it helps if you have some disposable income! Getting Fraxeled costs anywhere from $1,000 to $5,000 per session, and — you guessed it — dermatologists recommend multiple sessions.

KELLY OSBOURNE SHE NAILS IT — FOR $250,000

At last year's Emmy Awards, Kelly wore enough money on her fingers to support several families. Her nail polish boasted 267 carats of black diamonds by L.A. jeweler Azature, and it can be yours for $250,000 a bottle. "I'm sing myself to have that much money on my nails!" said Kelly.

JENNIFER ANISTON TO THE MAT WITH MANDY

Jen's physique is the envy of every 40-something. Her secret: yoga with pal and trainer Mandy Ingber. They meet twice a week for private, $300-an-hour sessions. "When I started doing yoga with Mandy, I noticed many things," Jen said. "My legs getting leaner, my arms getting stronger and most importantly, an inner strength." (Mere mortals can buy Mandy's workout DVD for $15).

RIHANNA

$23,000-A-WEEK HAIR HABIT

You read that right — that's how much it costs Rihanna for the seemingly endless incarnations of her coiff. The beneficiary of all that bread is celebrity hairstylist Ursula Stephen, who has been with the singer since the start of her chart-topping career. Ursula reportedly charges Rihanna $3,200 a day — and she is considered to be part of a full-time staff. That adds up to almost $23,000 a week, or more than $1 million a year to keep up with RiRi's hair-raising habit.

ANGELINA JOLIE

CAVIAR FOR THE SKIN

She's admitted her family's weakness for fast food, but when it comes to her meal ticket — that iconic face — Angie uses La Prairie's Skin Caviar Luxe Cream, which contains eggs of a Baerii sturgeon, a protein-rich ingredient that firms and moisturizes. The cost for 100 ml? $745.

MICHELLE WILLIAMS

$4K MAKEUP SESSION

Michelle has that fresh-faced glow down pat, but it can take a pretty penny to get it! For example, at the 2012 Academy Awards the Best Actress nominee's look was achieved with $4,000 worth of Chanel products, including Sublimage creamy moisturizer; Vitalumière Aqua Ultra-Light Skin Perfecting Makeup SPF 15 foundation; and Horizon blushes (a blend of rose, coral, and peach shades) on the face. And on the eyes — Ombre Essentielle in Tigerlily, over soft pink and brown shades from Chanel Les 4 Ombres in Mystic Eyes. A perfect complement to her Louis Vuitton dress!

Makeup artist Angela Levin created Michelle's Oscars look and has also worked with Jennifer Aniston.
